

I support increasing access to the airwaves for low power FM.

A LPFM station was nearly established a few years ago in my community of Flagstaff, but this was prevented by FCC regulations. Before moving here, I lived in Moab, Utah, a small community with a very successful community station. I have often missed having a community station here. It surprises me that even though Flagstaff is a much larger community, it doesn't provide a station with any local flavor or individuality.

Please consider enacting regulations which would permit such smaller stations to operate. Thanks.
